context

language

Bold text, underlined text, small caps, lowercase, [word box] italics and colours (white, red, 'quotation green, #ff0000hex' blue) are used to encode appraisal analyses.

A key (or style) is a set of situational (related to register) variants of sub-selections of the global evaluative meaning potential, establishing different probabilities for the occurrence of the different types of Different stages of the text can be ATTACH. cohesion and resonance associated with a different key. Sub-keys within one key are referred to as identified with specific individuals are referred to as signature.

assessing behaviour in institutionalised as proposals.

Related to reaction (emotion): not the emotions someone feels but ascribing the power to trigger such feelings to things.

Related to affection (motive): meanings resist the categorial interpersonal conferment associated with experiential meaning to causes spread across or across phases of discourse.

Related to probability (e.g. certainly).

Related to usuality (e.g. often).

Related to modulation of inclination (e.g. determined to).

Related to ability (e.g. can).

Related to possibility (e.g. allowed).

Related to obligation (e.g. should).

Related to desirability (e.g. wanted).

Related to normality (e.g. usual).

Related to capacity (e.g. able).

Related to tenacity (e.g. persistent).

Related to veracity (e.g. honest).

Related to propriety (e.g. correct).

Related to satisfaction (e.g. pleased).

Related to reality (e.g. real).

Related to comprehension (e.g. understood).

Related to inclination (e.g. keen).

Related to emotivity (e.g. surprised).

Related to security (e.g. confident).

Related to salience (e.g. important).

Related to cognition (e.g. sure).

Affairs of the heart.

Affairs of the state.

Affairs of the world.

Affairs of the day.

Affairs of the mind.

Affairs of the body.

Affairs of the soul.

Affairs of the spirit.

Affairs of the flesh.

Affairs of the head.

Affairs of the hand.

Affairs of the foot.

Affairs of the eye.

Affairs of the ear.

Affairs of the nose.

Affairs of the mouth.

Affairs of the face.

Affairs of the body.

Affairs of the mind.

Affairs of the heart.

Affairs of the state.

Affairs of the world.

Affairs of the day